| Assignment Description  |   |  |                  |
| The Japanese government has long been collaborating with African countries in the field of human resource development through higher education and vocational training projects. The effects and impacts such long term cooperation generated could not simply be grasped by applying only the traditional five evaluation criteria. Therefore, the study will shed some lights on aspects/issues which have not thoroughly been elaborated by applying the five evaluation criteria by collecting and analyzing the related information on projects on higher education and vocational training to identify characteristics or strength of Japan's long term cooperation in the field of human resource development. The study team will also make a promotion DVD and a pamphlet which will be shared and distributed in TICAD V in 2013. The targeted projects are the following: Senegal: Center for Technical and Vocational Training (CFPT) Senegal - Japan Uganda: Nakawa Vocational Training Institute Project in Uganda/ NAVTI Zambia: University Teaching Hospital, School of Medicine/Veterinary Medicine of UNZA Kenya: Jomo Kenyatta University College of Agriculture and Technology |   |  |                  |
